

InSight:

PC Replacements: Lawyers,
Auditors, and Common Sense
Rules

May 7, 2003

The economic recession has stalled PC replacements at many penny-pinching enterprises because the old machines are still operating. Now, time has caught up with Microsoft's operating system support life cycle. In the next eight months, Windows NT 4.xx and Windows 98/SE -- installed on over 50 million business desktops around the world -- will no longer get updates or security patches. Prudent businesses should consider accelerating their PC replacements. The good news is, this is an excellent time to start planning a PC acquisition cycle.

Peter Kastner

Click here to read this report